DISTRICT 35 O NEWSLETTER

DG Steve Hilaire

Fellow Lions,

We have all heard various sayings about women, “A man may work from sun to sun but a woman’s work is never done, she was created from his rib to be at his side throughout his life, give her a house and she will make a home.” There is also a great role for women in Lionism. They are among the hardest working Lions around. They were there at the start of Lionism and returned in 1987. Since then they have grown to about 28% worldwide with 30% in the US and 46% in 35 O. In 16 months, we will be the first service organization to have a lady lion as our CEO. When we are recruiting new members, we must recognize the value of women and give them meaningful roles in serving our communities. They are hard workers and although men and woman are alike, they can sometimes see another view of things that lead to a better prospective. We are all similar, adventurous. experienced, reliable and we all want to make a difference. We will make life richer for others because of the synergy of our actions.

Please remember to get your nominations committee working on a slate of incoming officers 2017/18.

Together we can make a difference!

Preventing Membership Loss - Eight Tips to Prevent Lion Burnout

The 90/10% principle of Lion involvement: 10% of the membership are burning themselves out to keep the organization on mission while 90% enjoy the benefits and do next to nothing. When I think of that 90/10% principle, I picture a professional football game where 22 players on the field are in desperate need of rest while 100,000 spectators in the stands need some exercise.

Let's face it, many of us have a tendency to burnout Lions—especially our committed Lions who serve weekly at impacting people's lives. It's these key Lions who grow weary... not our Lions who show up once in a great while to help on a single event. How can we do a better job valuing and keeping our key Lions?

In order to prevent burnout, create a healthy Lion culture by using the following burnout busters.

Recruit teams rather than individuals: Sharing the Lion load with a team lightens the load. But wait, that means recruiting twice as many people. And since we have a hard time getting individuals, how are we going to recruit a whole team? Your team members are your best recruiters. Encourage them to recruit members to join them on the team to share the load. The New Breed very busy, professional, high capacity Lion is much more likely to join a team than take on the sole responsibility for a role.

Create holidays: Students and teachers get holiday breaks. Workers get paid vacation. Why not Lions? They need breaks from their role to get refreshed. One way to do this is to organize different shifts or time periods of commitment. Look at how you are organized. Many years ago—too many to count—I led a choir for my church. We often took a January break after a heavy Christmas season and a summer break.

Organize tactically: Tactics are short term tasks. Not having enough Lions for an event can lead to burnout when you ask too much from too few. Tactical planning is essential to make sure you have just enough Lions, but not so many that people stand around with nothing to do.

Reconnect to purpose—think strategically: In my former life as a corporate trainer I was always telling managers to connect purpose to pay. It's no different for non-paid staff as they need to feel that what they are doing is essential to the cause. This is especially true when Lions are doing administrative work. The Lion will wonder at times, “What difference am I making by getting this newsletter out?”

Provide a Lion break room: A Lion break room with food is a place for Lions to retreat, relax and share together. Create a special place for your Lions that they can call their own and stock it with snacks.

Debrief emotionally draining roles: One of the Lions I met during the Omaha, NE USA/Canada Forum, was an EMT in Colorado on a very elite mountain climbing rescue team. He told me about a rescue attempt where the person their team was trying to rescue died on the mountain. To deal with this kind of stress, EMT teams have debriefing sessions with trained professionals to help them deal with what they just witnessed. In the past few months I have met many Lions who are spending their free time on emotional draining activities. Make sure you understand and provide the resources to deal with these kinds of emotional draining roles.

Recognize stamina diversity: Every Lion is unique. Some are able to handle large amounts of work while others cannot carry such a heavy load. Be very aware of the tolerance levels of your Lions and divide up the work assignments accordingly.

Resist the OBTW's: "Oh, By the Ways" are one of the "seven deadly sins of recruiting". Too many times we are so desperate for Lions that we don't tell the whole story until after the person says "yes." Then we add a whole list of "Oh, by the ways." Often the Lion is excited to start, but before long all the "OBTW's" overwhelm them and they burnout in a matter of months.

And a final note: Remember that Lions have other jobs, and they have a life outside of our organization. Our best Lions are often involved in many organizations in addition to ours, so that means they could be on Lion overload and heading straight towards the burnout wall. The main thing is to keep your Lions feeling great about what they are doing. Lionism on a regular basis will take everything Lions are willing to give and often even more. We need to take these steps to make sure that we don't lose the best Lions.

Working together "We Serve" better,

Fellow Lions,

I had the opportunity to visit with the Lions of District N at their recent Cabinet Meeting. As part of their opening, they played a spoken word version of Desiderata. It was the theme of the meeting and intended to give pause and reflection. Although I was not very familiar with this poem, it seemed vaguely familiar. Now having listened to it, I am moved by its power and depth. Each line is profound and applicable. And I wanted to share it with you.

Respectfully

Lion Helene Thompson, 2VDG

Go placidly amid the noise and the haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible, without surrender, be on good terms with all persons.

Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even to the dull and the ignorant; they too have their story.

Avoid loud and aggressive persons; they are vexatious to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain or bitter, for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself.

Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time.

Exercise caution in your business affairs, for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals, and everywhere life is full of heroism.

Be yourself. Especially, do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is as perennial as the grass.

Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth.

Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with dark imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness.

Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here.

And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore, be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be.

And whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life, keep peace in your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be cheerful. Strive to be happy.

Max Ehrmann, "Desiderata"

President's Message

Dear Lion,

For 100 years, Lions have served. Each and every Lion matters because they make their communities a better place for all. In celebration of our century of humanitarian service, we're working to serve more people than ever before. To do this, we need more caring people like you who want to make to make a real difference in the lives of others.

Did you know that every Lions club member serves an average of 70 people per year? That's why inviting your family and friends to join us in service is one of the most powerful ways we can serve more people and address unmet needs at home and around the world.

Plus, inviting new members and sponsoring new clubs is more rewarding than ever before. You and your club are eligible for special limited-edition Centennial rewards, including a pin and certificate, when you induct new members and sponsor new clubs.

If you haven't welcomed a new member into your club this year, make it a priority to do so before the end of the Lion year. Thank you for working to expand the service impact of your club and Lions Clubs International!

Very truly yours,
Chancellor Bob Corlew

Southeastern Guide Dogs has cultivated a well-defined program to breed dogs whose temperament, intelligence, and health combine to produce some of the finest guide dogs in the world. Our breeding colony supplies our visually impaired students with dogs who are trained to guide them in their everyday travels.

To support our breeding program, we partner with selected volunteers who host our breeder dogs in their homes, then return the dogs to campus when needed for breeding and whelping. These breeder host families are an extension of our work here at Southeastern Guide Dogs, and donate time, attention, and helping hands to help us reach our mission.

If you are interested in hosting a breeder check out www.guidedogs.org/volunteer/host-a-breeder

Meet Jeremy and guide dog Legion

Jeremy wears a blue and purple striped shirt and jeans while kneeling next to Legion, his black Lab.

When Jeremy Hall was born three months early, human error led to too much oxygen in the incubator resulting in total vision loss. He “hated” using a cane, so as a young man heading to college in 1993, he came to Southeastern Guide Dogs for his first guide dog, Reuben. Next came Rufus, then Watson, and now he’s met a happy black Labrador named Legion. Jeremy has relied on his dogs to help him navigate from Middle Tennessee State University and on to an IT career, and now Legion will accompany him back to his wife and young son in Sterling, Virginia.

Watson retired only four days before class began for Jeremy, so as he grieved for Watson, Legion’s affection was a welcome distraction. As a seasoned handler, Jeremy is impressed with Legion’s working skills.

Jeremy leads worship in his church, so all of his dogs have accompanied him as he sings and plays piano in front of crowds. “I’ve had mixed results in bringing a dog on the platform. Some people consider it a distraction, and for some people, it helps them worship.” Hall believes because it’s a service animal serving; it’s a perfect example of how each person serves.

“My first dog had been in so many church services that when you would say, ‘Let us pray,’ he would bend his head down and put his feet over his nose. And when you said, ‘Amen,’ he would put his feet right and lift his head up again. We didn’t teach him that, he just learned that.”

Jeremy says Legion really loves music. “When I played the keyboard on campus, he would walk over and put his head on my knees and drool. He was learning what I like, and I was learning what he likes.”

Jeremy, wearing a red polo and blue jeans, waves to oncoming traffic as he crosses a bridge, with Legion and a trainer.
