Hello Lions Family,

In 1CS, we are working together as one. I'm very happy to report that the new Lions Club in Cairo is progressing. Our first organizational meeting was held this month on January 16th. With the next meeting scheduled for January 29. Reminders have been sent and we are expecting a good turnout.

1CS district goals are well progressing. Emphasis has been expressed to each club visited about reporting service activities and now we are at 65% on service reporting. All Club Officers have been trained except 3 Lions Clubs, which will be done by the first week in March.

Membership is also doing well in 1CS, with 2 to 5 new members joining clubs. Members of the Mounds Lions Club helped serve breakfast at this year's Martin Luther King Jr. Annual NAACP Celebration held this year at the Meridian School gymnasium.

During this January month the Mounds Lions Club has volunteered at the Rise Community Market, which will be closing at the end of January, serving meals to help pay some of their financial obligations.

The district has helped a family that had a fire and with the winter months upon us, volunteers are helping at a local noonday food program in Cairo, which prepares meals for senior citizens who come through the week.

At the Mounds Public Library, volunteers assist with the daily operations, which is open for activities, which includes use of computers. WE SERVE!

LIONS CLUBS INTERNATIONAL District 1-CS

January 27, 2026

Fellow Lions of District 1-CS,

Our district may be small in numbers, but we are mighty in heart. What we lack in size, we make up for in dedication, loyalty, and the kind of service that comes from knowing our communities — and each other — on a personal level. That closeness is our strength, and it is exactly why leadership in District 1-CS matters so deeply.

Today, I'm reaching out with a sincere plea: we need Lions who are willing to step forward and consider serving as a Vice District Governor.

Leadership is not about stepping up for the good of the whole family. It's about making sure our clubs feel supported, our members feel valued, and our service continues to reach the people who depend on us.

If you've ever felt proud of what our district accomplishes, imagine how much more we can do with your leadership guiding the way. And if you've ever wondered whether you're ready — remember that no one starts ready.

Lions who want to help shape the future of our small but powerful district. You need commitment, compassion, and the courage to take that first step. The district team will support you, mentor you, and walk beside you every step of the journey.

Our clubs depend on it; our communities depend on it.

Your leadership could be exactly what District 1-CS needs to grow, to strengthen, and to continue serving with pride.

Together, we can keep our small district strong.

Together, we can ensure that 1-CS continues to shine.

Together, WE SERVE.

MOUNDS LIONS CLUB

During this January month the Mounds Lions Club has volunteered at the Rise Community Market, which will be closing at the end of January, serving meals to help pay some of their financial obligations.

Have Lions Clubs become an “Old Man’s Club”?

Contrary to the stereotype, Lions Clubs today are significantly more diverse. Founded over a century ago, the organization has evolved to include a broad demographic of members, encompassing men and women across various age groups, as well as a prominent youth branch known as Leo Clubs. The total membership of Lions Clubs International spans approximately 1.35 to 1.4 million individuals across more than 200 countries.

Reasons Behind the “Old Man’s Club” Perception

Several factors contribute to the perception that Lions Clubs cater primarily to older individuals:

- The organization was established in 1917, giving it a long-standing
- Many long-time members tend to be older, particularly in rural
- Traditionally, service clubs like Rotary, Kiwanis, and Lions have experienced aging membership trends.

What the Data Reveals

- Lions Clubs International boasts over 1.35 million members globally.
- The membership includes both men and women, countering the notion that it is exclusively male.
- The Leo Clubs, which focus on youth involvement, attract a significant number of teenagers and young adults.
- As one of the most globally diverse service organizations, Lions Clubs operate in more than 200 countries.

Changes Within Lions Clubs

To combat perceptions of being an “old man’s club,” many Lions Clubs are implementing strategies to attract younger members, including:

- Engaging in community projects aimed at younger demographics.
- Offering flexible meeting formats to accommodate diverse schedules.
- Shifting focus toward contemporary service areas such as environmental initiatives, hunger relief, and global health concerns.

Conclusion

While some local Lions Clubs may still reflect an older demographic depending on their community, the international organization as a whole is not an “old man’s club.” Instead, it functions as a diverse and inclusive volunteer network that is actively welcoming younger generations. If you’re interested, I can provide a comparison of Lions Clubs with other service organizations, such as Rotary and Kiwanis, to highlight their differences.

Now that the holidays are over and kids are back in school the _____ Lions Club and American Academy of Ophthalmology are offering some suggestions to help parents protect their children's eyes from damage due to holiday gift items.

While seeming harmless, paint ball guns and air guns can cause lasting damage to kid's eyes. New findings from the American Academy of Ophthalmology suggest that these "toys" are harming more eyes than ever before. Eye injuries from paintball, pellet, airsoft and bb guns have risen by 50% since 1990 even as injuries to other body parts have become less common.

Far from a toy, an airsoft gun or air gun is a replica of a real firearm that shoots small lightweight plastic pellets or bbs. Since 2010, the number of people admitted to the hospital for eye injuries from air guns has risen by a staggering 600%. In fact, most children's eye injuries that led to a hospital admission were caused by air guns. Unfortunately, eye damage from an air gun injury is often long-lasting. In one study, about 3 out of 10 young patients who suffered air gun injuries still had poor eyesight after treatment.

Here are the most common injuries from air guns:

- Bleeding inside the eye (hyphemia)
- Scrapes on the surface of the eye (corneal abrasion)
- Detached retina
- Dislocated lens within the eye
- Rupture of the eyeball

Protective goggles can combat eye injuries during paintball and other sports. Goggles designed for skiing, sun and wind are not safe for protection with airball use. Also, safety glasses designed for home or industrial use are not recommended due to the fact they can shatter if hit with a projectile. Recommended ballistic safety eyewear must meet military ballistic standards. They must cover the eyes completely and slightly wrap around the head. Eyecare providers can advise parents on the proper protective devices for their children.

Popular brand darts and off-brand darts are also harmful to the eyes. A recent study supports the American Academy of Ophthalmology position that projectile toys are not safe. Injuries from projectiles can be avoided by either not providing these items to children or if they are in use, safety precautions and adult supervision are necessary.

The _____ Lions Club and American Academy of Ophthalmology urge parents who do purchase projectile shooting items also provide safety equipment to safeguard their children's eyesight and use common sense rules and adequate supervision.
