NCERT Solutions for Class 5 of English Grammar Unit 7 Reported Speech (direct and indirect speech) was updated to the 2022-2023 session. State Board and CBSE students may consider the usefulness of those content that clarify doubts. There are many examples of the concept in practice. Rating: English Grammar: 7 Speech (direct and indirect) these points illustrate two ways in which we can convey the words of the speaker. 1. The teacher asked: "Have you done homework?" - The student said: "I'm sorry, the teacher, I couldn't finish it." The teacher said: "Why couldn't you do homework?" And now get out of my class! 2. The teacher asked the student if he did his homework. The student apologized that he could not do homework. Knowing this, the teacher angrily asked him to ask why he did not do his homework and asked him to leave the class. In 1 we give the exact words used by the speaker. This is called direct speech. In the second year we do not give the exact words of the speaker, we only give what he said. This is called intermediate speech or narrative. These rules will helpDirect and indirect language change: Rule 1: If the verb is in the present or future time, the verb is not changed at all. Live: Meena says there is no water in the pitcher. Indirectly: Meena says there is no water in the pitcher. Rule 2: If the reporting verb in the past tense, the verb is also in the past tense. The size of the letters in quotation marks is changed as follows. 1. A simple presence becomes a simple past; As: Directly: The teacher said, "Kitty works very hard." Indirectly: The teacher said Kitty works very hard. Rule 3: (exception for rule 2.) If the language contains a universal or common fact, the simple presence in the report does not change to the corresponding simple past, but will remain unchanged. Live: Mother Teresa said, "Caritas begins at home. Indirectly: Mother Teresa said that charity begins at home. Principle 4: Students can take a closer look at the following phenomena to understand changes in people. The first person is transferred to a person of the subject. The other person becomes an object person. There are no changes for a third party. Rule 5: The signaled speech will change to "Say" yes: Directly: He said to me, "I'll go tomorrow." Indirect: He told me that he would go the next day. Principle 6: In character language, the words of the proximity are converted into words of distance or distance, for example: This will change, for example after the next month. The language mentioned is a way to express your thoughts. There are two types of notifications: (i). Direct speech (ii). Indirect speech Direct speech: In direct sentences, we represent exactly the words that the spokesman used. This is called direct speech. Example: Meena says: "There is no water in the pitcher. Indirect speech: In the reported speeches, we do not mention the exact words of the speaker, but only the essence of what he said. This is called speech or indirect narration. For example, Meena says there is no water in the pitcher. Perfect perfect becomes perfect; WhenThe transition from direct speech to indirect. Example: Direct: Sikant said. Mini coped with the task. Indirectly: Sikant said that Mini did his job. If the question reports contains any universal or general fact, then the present simple time in the speech reports does not pass into the corresponding completed time, but remains the same. Example: Direct: Mother Teresa said: "Mercy begins at home." Meaning: Mother Teresa said that mercy begins at home.
