Squeeze in a narrow couple of spanx can make you look better if you don't feel better. But where's all your extra disappear at temporarily? Of Meisa Salaita in style: Brice Gaillard; Photographer: Richard Felber as part of the kips decorator decorators last year showhouse € ¢ ¢,~ "An annual advantage for Kips Bay Boys and Girls Club, a social-service organization that enriches the life of about 12,000 children in New York City from You are at 18 "Garden Designer Richard Heller transformed a sterile terrace space over the first floor of a city house around 1896 in an outdoor room box. The centerpiece is a 20-foot node garden, planted with a mixture of boxwood, private variegated and leucothoe and white thought violets. This seating area, evocation of a medieval outdoor pavilion, the green roof space of Designer Designer Richard Heller. Entering from the back of the second floor of the house and passing a lacticandro divisor, you see for the first time the pretty living room ... A gauzose sofa and calculated in front of a cocktail table flanked by two chairs (all furniture and pillows They are weather resistant). The floor is antique limestone. In addition to the brick parterre, surrounded by grass. The corner of The Far Wall protects a classic style statue; A stone platform with cutlery and other plantations at the top of the line the right wall. At the beginning, Heller and the team of him found a hard surface with practically no landscape. Heller has chosen to create a formal garden of this type because it is in line with the French Renaissance style of the house and its intricate model of capped plantation gives visual interest if they are seen from both rooms in front of home and from its higher windows . The surrounding herb, vertical lacticurics and the elegant topiary in terracotta planters can refer to the fascinating qualities of a historic center of the courtyard, but the plot is definitely 21st century, and offers both ecological and aesthetic benefits. The finished formal garden is the position feature of this outdoor room on a terrace over the first floor of a New York house. Most ancient style roof gardens involves a combination of decking and planters, but in this green up-to-date roof, designed and built by Heller and his team in less than three weeks, a shallow bed and one "Carpet" coverage of grass most of the surface and use of vessels is limited to the perimeter. The principle is that a thin covered with living plants is a roof from extreme heat and cold and can then cut energy costs. (In fact, a Canadian study has shown that a 6-inch green roof often reduced the heat of 95 percent and heat losses of 26 percent compared to a conventional one.) Absorbing the heat from their surroundings in the transpiration process, the plants On an urban green roof it can help reduce temperatures around them, relieve the climate phenomenon known as the effect of the island of heat, according to which the city and suburban districts are considerably hottest (up to 10 degrees Fahrenheit) compared to the Rural areas. Photography: Getty A shortage of affordable accommodation for young people and elderly relatives are prompend extended families to consider buying together. But with different generations in a home, what is the best way to make it work? Councilor Phillip Shares this advice: if the property is not joint possession, the person who owns legal rights, so it is important to establish this and make changes. Decide how the resources are divided, with all those who said. When old people say "Come live with me", often mean "Come and live with me as if I were still 12 ". Recognize that you are all adults and maybe each of you could be responsible for the part of space. If practical, divide the living space. The agreed land rules are a good idea. These could cover smoking and drinking at home, meals, bedtime, laundry, the way you leave the state of the bathroom and the kitchen, use of the phone of the house and leaving a note when you go out. You must have a way to resolve a dispute, whether it's a family conference or launch a coin. You could create a written "family contract, to which everyone contributes and agree. Accept that there will be topics. What is more important is to keep the communication lines open, and when something annoys you, be ready to say immediately, "I'm really going through this." If a generation decides to move, manage this without causing a long-term family split. Always give as much notice as possible. Explain why you're leaving or want to sell and allow others in the fairly time family to fall asleep your absence. To find a family-friendly consultant, visit ITS "Itsgoodtotalk.org.uk.
