Or this movie made this movie until the end of season 4 where season 4 was a bit weak, the effort shown in this movie is surprising. The movie looked very smooth and flowing, one and a half hour and the story was fascinating and climax. The story was well written, one of the main bad guys and one of the experiments with documents and the goal was just a normal child who is the hero of the main story of MHA, especially if it inspires how useful variety of different curses in the world. The story was completely different from the trailer which was a great feeling that it was an unpredictable and unique story. The bad guy was much better than the first movie, but he didn't answer the movie motifs in great detail, but he was clearly out to steal the baby. Of course, Deku and Bakugou were often just like them, but because it was different from the other heroes, Bakuus character development really shined on the island. Deku was charming when he brought the curse to see them together. The story is well written and improves 1-A instead of being stagnant and not very useful in the first movie. Seeing the nine flowers on the field, the last one felt satisfying and beautiful because it was just one experiment after all and Shigaraki is nowhere near the main bad animation was absolutely breathtaking. Every movement felt smooth in daytime scenes and there was no laziness or neglect. The animators put in a lot of effort!The combat scenes were just as amazing, if not better than those that we saw in seasons 3 and 4. I love it when the fight scenes play music in the background and it is calm, it shows so much emotion without words. As always, the off-road east is fantastic and gave me a nice buoyancy and chills like my heroic academy. Overall, I liked the film and while others may say that it felt a bit childish, I really liked it, although I was not particularly invested in the anime.
