FUNCTIONAL GROUPS & MOLECULAR FORMULAE

- What is the molecular formula of ethane? Propane? Butane?
- What is the molecular formula of ethene? Propene? Butene?

3. Complete the table for the following groups:

FUNCTIONAL GROUP	STRUCTURAL FORMULA	GENERAL FORMULA	EXAMPLE
Alkane		C_nH_{2n+2}	Ethane
Alkene		C_nH_{2n}	Ethene
Alkyne		C_nH_{2n-2}	Ethyne
Alcohol		$C_nH_{2n+2}O$	Ethanol
Aldehyde		$C_nH_{2n}O$	Ethanal
Ketone		$C_nH_{2n}O$	Propanone

Over time since you cleaned it last time, the garage probably has accumulated a whole garbage head. To regain space control, you must first conquer the disorder. Start with the removal of everything $\text{C} \times$, yes, everything $\text{C} \text{C} \text{C} \text{C}$ and in the process, set the articles in three distinct categories. In a group are the tools and supplies you need regular access. In another, seasonal items are used only a few months a year. The most important thing, designates a stack for waste or donation. Fotosearch.com with the empty garage, there is no better time to give him the kind of accurate cleaning that rarely gets but desperately needed. Cover the ceiling and walls, then focus on the floors. Here, after cleaning up, go to work with the Hyde PivotPro external cleaning wand. An ingenious tool that sticks directly to your garden tube, PivotPro Blasts Gunk away, and its patented pivoting spout allows you to reach every slot, without having to bend, lengthen or lower. Maintain a simple organizational principle in front of your mind: the elements used together should be held together. For example, if you like working on projects in the garage, create a distinct area for the storage of the tools. The same applies to automotive supplies or sports equipment. Furthermore, keep in mind that, at least in the case of opaque containers, a 160; A small additional effort made available for labeling now can potentially save a lot of frustration later than 194; Fotosearch.com Every day coming out of the house is one day you can see the garage. So the question is: do you like what you see? If your garage resembles more, it would surely benefit from a cleaning, whereas cleaning the outside of the garage may seem laborious, a 160; Hyde Pivotpro makes it a snap. Just add soap to Integrated tank, set the soap-water ratio, then point and shoot. Hit the hard brush in position when you need it, out of the feet when you don't. Finished! Thehyldeway.com Ponding a fur fresco fresco Paint? There's no faster, simpler, or cheaper way to give your garage a big transformation. From previous painting projects, inside or outside, you know that quality results depend on proper preparation. To this end, the use of HYDE PivotPro[®] 160; to clean the garage, completely and with surprising ease, is just the first step towards a brand new look for a garage whose beautiful exterior appearance corresponds to the pleasant organization contained behind its doors. fotosearch.com Every week from New Year's Eve, receive tips around the house, DIY project inspiration, and smart gift ideas to help make this your best holiday seasoning ever—subscribe! Developing self-driving is more than teaching computers when to accelerate or brake. Autonomous driving systems must be programmed with an infinite number of behavioural signals that human drivers take for granted. General Motors-owned Cruise believes that the key to making their cars better drivers is creating better digital maps to drive them. Here226 explains how Cruise does. Some companies buy maps from third-party vendors, but Cruise has chosen to develop all of its internal maps. This gives Cruise complete control, and makes it easier to keep maps updated and implement changes. Erin Antcliffe, Cruise is 128;A the senior project manager for mapping, wrote in a blog post. Self-driving use maps for the same reason that humans do $\text{A} \text{A}$ to find out where they are. In big cities like San Francisco, where Cruise is experimenting with autonomous car prototypes on public roads, tall buildings can block GPS signals, Antcliffe noted. Cruise226;128;A cards also contain information such as lane boundaries and the positions of traffic lights and curves. When a car Already on a road, he uses lidar to compare the surrounding environment with a map, allowing him to determine his position down to the centimeter, Antcliffe said. The insertion of more information on the maps allows you to obtain the processing energy for manoeuvres and allows the car to position itself accurately. precision, he added. This makes it easier for cars facing the unpredictable actions of other vehicles, as well as cyclists and pedestrians, on the crowded streets of the city. These data are useful only if they are accurate, though. Without entering many details, Antcliffe said Cruise has the possibility of quickly updating its maps to take into account changes such as the construction or addition of new cycle paths. Antcliffe called this "competitive advantage". The development of the map goes hand in hand with the development of cars that drive independently, said Antcliffe. Just like human drivers, the cars that ride alone work better when they are more familiar with the road environment. Cruise is able to encode this familiarity in the maps of him, adding information based on the previous experience in a given area. You can simultaneously test different versions of a specific map function, and the one that works best can be quickly applied to the entire autonomous cruise fleet. Cruise believes that better maps will give him an advantage in the race to market autonomous driving cars, but these plans have recently hit a road block. Cruise GM parent initially wanted to launch a ridesharing pilot service in 2019, but Cruise said he could not respect this deadline. Meanwhile, Waymo launched a small Ridesharing commercial service in Arizona, and other companies are giving racing to the public as part of pilot programs.
