The MSDS tells workers what risks are associated with the chemicals and outlines how workers can protect themselves with personal protective equipment, or PPE. For example, one sheet might hold all the products you sell along with their UPC codes and unit prices, while another sheet might contain a log of your sales. Checking the MSDS after exposure to chemicals helps first responders make sure the proper first aid measures are applied. Environmental Cleanup Agencies MSDSs are also used after a chemical spill for the purpose of cleaning the exposed area and reducing the environmental impact. While drivers aren't typically responsible for handling the hazardous materials the same way workers in a facility such as a factory are, they may still come into contact with the chemicals. First Responders and MSDSs If someone is injured by hazardous materials on the job, the first responder who administers first aid needs to understand what he or she is dealing with in order to offer proper care. Supervisors can manage and assign chemical inventory to specific contracts or facilities. Companies maintain MSDSs that the workers must be permitted to read, according to the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, or OSHA. Press Enter finish.
