APA Research Paper Outline Template

Beginning on the next page is an outline template (in Microsoft Word format), which is filled in with a sample to show you what a final outline looks like. Here is how to fill in your own outline:

- Triple click on a sentence to highlight it. (Or swipe across it with a mouse's left key held down.)
 - Type your sentence. (The original words should automatically disappear; if they don't, use the Delete key to eliminate them.)
 - When you don't need an outline subdivision (such as "C" or "3"), delete the line.
 - When you need to insert a new subdivision, place the cursor at the end of the sentence immediately above where you want to insert, press Enter, go to the Style drop-down menu (typically located next to the Font drop-down menu) at the top of the screen, and select the appropriate style:
 For I, II, III, etc., choose Outline 1
 For A, B, C, etc., choose Outline 2
 For 1, 2, 3, etc., choose Outline 3
 For a, b, c, etc., choose Outline 4
- NOTE: You will need to manually enter the correct letter or number, and you may need to change letters and numbers above and below your new entry. At times, you may need to use the Tab and Backspace keys to align entries properly.
- TROUBLESHOOTING TIP: If Microsoft Word performs undesired formatting—such as inserting unwanted letters and numbers and changing the indentation—go to Format menu, click AutoFormat, click Options, choose the "AutoFormat As You Type" button, and deselect (so that there is no checkmark) these two choices: "Automatic Bulleted Lists" and "Automatic Numbered Lists."
 - The first time you save your document, choose "Save As" in the File menu and provide a new name. (This will preserve the original file and its sample.)
 - For Bibliography entries, you can choose (from the Style drop-down menu at the top of the screen) either the "MLA Entry" style or the "APA Entry" style. (See Chapter 6 in the text for details.)
 - For an explanation of the different parts of an outline, see Chapter 12 in the text.

Color Psychology Paper

Research Question:

How does color affect one's mood?

Review of Literature:

Colors may just seem simple and unimportant, but they affect our daily lives more than we may know. If someone is feeling angry, it could just be because they're angry, or it could be perhaps that they are surrounded by or looking at the color red. That's right! People's moods can change just because they are looking at different colors! There are many theories on how just a simple color can change one's whole mood.

According to Johnson (2007), color does affect mood by producing certain chemicals and stimulating different feelings such as hunger. For example, blue can make one feel calm because it releases calming chemicals, and red can make one hungry because it is an appetite stimulant. Yellow can make one feel irritated, and it is a fact that people lose their temper most in yellow rooms. However, pink is tranquilizing and can make one feel weak. In conclusion, Johnson says that depending on the color, one's body can do things (like producing chemicals) that cause a certain emotional reaction (mad, sad, etc.).

Another idea, by Smith (2007), is that the effect color produces is based on what one's body does in response. For example, yellow is mentally stimulating, and activates memory, whereas red increases confidence. Also, brown can make a person feel orderly and stable, while a dark blue can make one feel sad. Therefore, Smith says that different colors do in fact change one's mood and the consequences can be negative or positive.

A third writer, Wollard, (2000) seems to think that color can affect one's mood, but the effect also can depend on one's culture and what one's personal reflection may be. For example, someone from Japan may not associate red with anger, as people from the U.S. tend to do. Also, a person who likes the color brown may associate brown with happiness. However, Wollard does think that colors can make everyone feel the same, or close to the same, mood. According to Wollard, pink reduces aggression, which is why the walls of the jail cells in the Seattle prison are pink! Also, brown can make one feel comforted. Wollard feels that colors do affect one's mood, but there are other factors that can alter what one is supposed to feel.

Eric, John, and Paraag's (2007) main point about color psychology is that color has both a physiological and psychological effect. For example, green makes people feel relaxed because it

Conclusion

Restate the thesis, but restate it in a way that acknowledges or includes the argument/points you make throughout your paper. A good conclusion should represent your topic in such a way that it reaches out and connects it to the world. Ideally it will tell the reader why your topic matters, or where it will take us.

Apa format research paper word template.

Writing a research paper is a little harder than a standard high school essay. You need to site sources, use academic data and show scientific examples. Before we begin, you will need guidelines on how to write a search document. Start the Search Process before you start writing the search document, you must do your search. It is important that you understand the theme, formulate the ideas of your document, create your thesis and learn to speak about your subject in an authoritative way. You will examine online databases, encyclopedias, almanacs, periodicals, books, newspapers, government publications, reports, guides and academic resources. Take notes while discovering new information about your given topic. Also keep track of the references you use so you can build your bibliography later and quote your resources. In organizing your search document, the thesis is where you explain to your readers what they can expect, submit your requests, answer any questions that have been asked or explain your interpretation of the subject you're researching. Therefore, the argument must be strong and easy to understand. His thesis must also be precise. You should answer the question that has been assigned to you, and there should be an opportunity for your position to be challenged or challenged. The body of your manuscript should support your thesis, and it should be more than a general fact. Creating an Outline Multi professor requires boundaries during the search paper writing process. You will discover that you want outlines created with a title page, abstract, introduction, paper search body and reference section. The title page is typically composed by the student; the abstract is a summary of the document. An introduction usually consists of one or two pages and comments on the subject of the research document. In the body of the research document, you'll find your bibliography. Use a search card example to help you with the outline if necessary. Organize your notes When you write your first draft, you will have to work first on the organization of your notes. During this process, I will decide which references you'll use in your bibliography and will work better as quotes in text. You will work on this as you develop your work plans and look at more examples of white paper to help you drive through the process. Write your Draft After you wrote your first and second project and received corrections from your professor, etc 128: Time to write your final copy. For now, you should have seen an example of a search paper layout and know how to put your newspaper together. You will have completed your title page, abstract, introduction, theses, quotes in text, footnotes and bibliography. Make sure you check with your professor to make sure you write in APA style, or if you use another style guide. BEFORE QUESTIONS ANSWERED. NET A research document is a common form of academic writing. Research documents require students and academics in locality 194; 160? information on a topic (i.e. conduct research), take a position on that topic and provide support (or evidence) for that position in an organized report. The term 'research document' may also refer to an academic article containing the results of the original research or to an evaluation of the research conducted by others. Most academic articles (194; 160? must undergo a peer review process before they can be accepted for in an academic magazine. The first step in drafting a search document is to define your search request. Did your instructor assign a specific subject? If yes, great 226; 128? You have covered this step. Otherwise, review the mission guidelines. Your instructor has probably provided several general for your consideration. Your research document should focus on one of these topics. You will spend some time thinking about your options before deciding which one of you you would like to explore more deeply. Try choosing a research application you're interested in. The research process takes time, and you will be much more motivated if you have a genuine desire to know more about the subject. D 160? Consideration should also be given to the availability of all the resources necessary to conduct in-depth research during the 1948; 160? research on your topic, as primary and secondary sources. Facing the research process in 194; 160? systematically establishing a research strategy. First, review your library website. What resources are available? Where will you find? Are there resources that require a special process to gain access? Start collecting these resources, 226; 128? In particular, those that may be difficult to access as soon as possible. Secondly, make an appointment with a reference librarian. A reference librarian is a superhero of research. He or she will listen to your search request, offer suggestions on how to focus your search, and will direct you to valuable resources that relate directly to your topic. Now that you've gathered a wide range of sources, it's time to evaluate them. First, consider the reliability of the information. Where does the information come from? What is the origin of the source? Secondly, assess priority 1994; 160? How does this information relate to your search request? Does it support, confuse or add context to its position? How does it relate to the other sources you'll be using in your paper? Once you have determined that your sources are reliable and relevant, you can proceed with confidence in the writing phase. D 160? The research process is one of the most demanding academic tasks you will be asked to complete. Fortunately, the value of writing a search document goes beyond the A+ you hope to receive. Here are some of the advantages of research documents. Scholarly Conventions: 194; 160? Writing a research document is a crash course in the stylistic conventions of school writing. During the research and writing process, you will learn to document your research, to quote sources appropriately, to form an academic document, to maintain an academic tone and more. Organising information: In a sense, research is nothing more than a huge organisational project. The information at your disposal is almost infinite, and it is your job to examine this information, to narrow it down, classify it and present it in a clear and relevant format. This process requires attention to detail and great brain power. Management time: research documents test your time management Every phase of the research and writing process takes time, and it is your job to put aside the time needed to complete each phase of the task. Maximize your efficiency by creating a search program and inserting "search time" blocks in your calendar as soon as you get the job. Exploration 160; Your Chosen: 194; 160? We couldn't forget the best part of research papers is learning about something that really turns you on. No matter what subject you choose, you have limited yourself to 194; 160? to get away from the research process with new ideas and countless nuggets of fascinating information. D 160? The best research documents are the result of a genuine interest and a thorough research process. With these ideas in mind, go ahead and research. Welcome to the academic conversation! Conversation!
